

LINCOLN BOYHOOD HOME (NPS)

On Indiana Route 345, near Gentryville, Lincoln City vicinity

Abraham Lincoln's family lived in southern Indiana from 1816 to 1830, a period during which he grew to manhood and received his early instruction in reading the law. The reputed grave site of Lincoln's mother and the site of the Lincoln cabin, built by his father Thomas Lincoln, were part of the Nancy Hanks Lincoln State Memorial until 1962. They are now in the Lincoln Boyhood National Memorial.